Best practices

When visiting several Girl Scout Councils recently, the Cultural Assets team noticed a number of creative ways to display collections.

Non-archival Clear Garment Bags make storage of non-collection uniforms easy for girls and troops to see, try, and borrow, like this example at Heart of the Hudson's Camp Wendy Museum.

McGuff Museum of Girl Scout History at Girl Scouts of Connecticut use their resources wisely; they repurposed a donated poster sales display from a local store into a badge display for easy flipping. It's a perfect way to display non-collection badges.

Archival slide storage sheets and binders work great for easy-to-reference storage of collection badges. The Cedar Hill historians labeled each badge and left a blank space for the ones they are missing.

Happy Halloween and Happy Birthday Juliette!

The GSEP (Eastern Penn.) History Committee is seeking either a copy or scan of both the July and August 1926 Girl Scout Leader magazine. Does anyone have one? We can be reached at historycommittee@hotmail.com.

Southeastern Michigan Council Museum recently started a Youth Docent Program, which provides leadership and communication skill development for Cadette, Senior, and Ambassador Girl Scouts. The process includes two Zoom meetings which provide museum information, youth program overview, and docent instruction, plus a site visit and tour run-through. The girls individually selected a script to learn in advance, and then presented at a museum event. Our first three Youth Docents were successful in presenting our history to 36 Girl Scouts and 13 Adults for a "Girl Scout Ways Badge" event on October 24th!

Southeastern Michigan Council Museum also created a new Happy 40th Birthday Daisy Girl Scout display with hands on activities.
